The Newcomen Society's charitable objective is:

“to promote, encourage and co-ordinate the study of the history of engineering, industry, and technology...”

The Society does not organise or run campaigns for the conservation of buildings, artefacts or equipment.

From time to time, and taking into account its limited financial and personnel resources, the Society may provide advice on conservation campaigns, mainly by directing campaigners to sources of information and/or support. The Society may also, on provision of appropriate information and arguments, be willing to write letters of support for certain campaigns and to bring them to the attention of its members via its website. The Society is not normally able to provide financial support for conservation projects or campaigns.

Requests for advice, information or other, non-financial, support should be sent to:
